

PHOTOGRAPHY IN RESEARCH

capturing science through the lens

A SULIEIA FREE BLENDED INTENSIVE COURSE organized by the Department of Pharmacy, University of Napoli Federico II in collaboration with EL Manar University, Tunis, Professors Sonia Margali, Imene Ouzari and the Photographer Salvatore Esposito.

Harnessing the power of photography to communicate and share research findings can transform the way information is conveyed, making complex ideas more accessible and engaging for a wider audience.

This hybrid Spring School will focus on developing skills in using photography to share Science. We will give an overview of the techniques and provide a space to practice.

Exploring the Power of Digital Images in Research
Photography is a powerful tool for data collection, communication, and dissemination. With smartphones now central to daily life, digital natives are naturally inclined to use images in their interactions. Encouraging participants to share photographs aligns with their routines, offering a more engaging and authentic way to collect data compared to traditional methods. This course will be taught by professional photographer Salvatore Esposito, a documentary photographer specializing in long-term projects. His work focuses on telling stories about the human condition and exploring profound social changes through photographic documentation.

Salvatore has received prestigious international awards, including the POYi, Sony Award, NPPA Award, Getty Images Grant, Terry O'Neill Award, and Prix du Documentaire.

His work has been featured in major magazines such as Sunday Times Magazine, National Geographic, Vanity Fair, L'Espresso, and Internazionale, among others.
